The Ohio State University

HISTORY OF THE
INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS OFFICE

At least one foreign student enrolled in The Ohio State University prior to 1900. The number, few in the beginning, grew steadily. World War I, then the depression years, and most recently World War II affected the educational plans of many students, both American and foreign. The educational pattern was the same, however, over the years and throughout the world: accompanying each period of technological, industrial, and economic growth was a burgeoning of students eager for education.

After World War II, nothing could halt the increasing flow of students from the developing nations who were seeking abroad the education not available to them at home. This search for education was probably one of the most far-reaching results of the world's most costly and exhausting war. The number of foreign students enrolled in The Ohio State University Autumn Quarter of 1945 was 77; of 1968, 883. (See Appendices) Through the years the number of students coming from each country and area of the world has increased.

Throughout the years during which foreign students have been attending The Ohio State University, the University administration has provided certain special services necessary and desirable to make their stay productive and rewarding to the foreign students themselves and to the University and the Columbus community as well. In the earlier years this responsibility was an adjunctive service of the Office of the Dean of Men. In 1938 the George Wells Knight International House for Men was established. The first directors of the House were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stecker.

When the Office of Student Relations was established in 1944 with the late Dr. Bland L. Stradley as the first Vice President for Student Relations, the counseling and assistance to foreign students became a part of the function of this office. As the number of foreign students increased, more and more time and attention were devoted to this important group. The Assistant to the Vice President for Student Relations assumed considerable responsibility in this area.

Faculty Committee

In December 1945, Vice President Bland L. Stradley appointed an ad hoc committee "to study aspects of foreign student problems". After the completion of the study, he appointed a Committee on Foreign Students to implement the recommendations of the ad hoc committee. In 1949, the Committee recommended that the name be changed to Committee on International Students. Up through the year 1956-1957, this Committee was appointed by and was advisory to the Vice President for Student Relations. It was not included in the list of committees published in the University Directory. Beginning in the year 1957-1958, the Committee on International Students was appointed by the President and was included in the list of committees in the University Directory. In 1964-1965, the Committee again became an ad hoc committee and was not listed with the official University committees. It continued to be active through 1965-1966. At the close of that academic year, Dean Bonner, with the concurrence of Doctor Cray, the Chairman of the Committee for 1965-1966, decided not to appoint a committee for 1966-1967. The decision to discontinue temporarily the committee was due to no lack of interest on the part of the Executive Dean or members of the committee; rather, it was the consensus that there was no special project within the jurisdiction of the committee which could be accomplished during the next year; also, an important factor in the decision was the failure of an appreciable number of students to respond to the excellent special programs planned for them by the committee in response to the results of the questionnaires submitted to them.

During the 20 years of its existence, the Committee made many excellent recommendations, many of which have been completely implemented. During the interim when there has been no committee, the International Students Office has had excellent liaison with faculty members, especially with those who served on the committee. (See Appendices)

The Vice President or Executive Dean for Student Relations and the Assistant to the Vice President for Student Relations (in 1958 designated as the International Student Adviser) served as ex-officio members of the Committee. Soon after the Committee was constituted, other ex-officio members were added: the Assistant or Associate Dean of the Graduate School, the representative of the Entrance Board (later changed to Admissions Office) responsible for the admission of foreign students, and two student representatives--one from the Student Senate and the other, the chairman or president of the current international student organization.

During the year 1948-1949:

The Faculty Committee on International Students began early in the year a comprehensive study of the special problems of foreign students on The Ohio State University campus. A survey was made of what was being done for students from other countries by various groups, both on and off the campus. Representatives of these groups were asked to meet with the Committee and to discuss their particular projects. A questionnaire was sent to all foreign students enrolled in the University in an effort to ascertain the extent to which they were participating in campus and community activities and their reaction to the University community. Faculty members were sent a questionnaire asking for an indication of an interest in students from other countries and for suggestions with reference to the special needs of these students.

The Committee's chief functions were to coordinate the programs of the various groups especially interested in foreign students, to carry on or assign to other groups desirable projects, and to make the student body and faculty aware of the excellent opportunities afforded by the presence on our campus of representatives of other nations. The functions were implemented in the office of the Vice President for Student Relations and later through the International Students Office.

Before 1950, the Committee gave special attention to the following:

Student organizations interested in and/or composed of students from other countries. (Guidance was given to the Cosmopolitan Club, the International Affairs Committee of the Student Senate, and the Embassy Club in developing plans for the International Hour and other projects.)

Endorsement of and cooperation with the University Religious Council in the "People Speak to People" program, directly involving American students with foreign students in a joint community enterprise.

The language problems and a testing program for international students.

A social event (breakfast or luncheon) for international students receiving degrees each quarter.

Development of an orientation program for international students entering the University Autumn Quarter 1950.

Cooperation with the Zonta Club in planning for the Zonta International House for Women.

Developments During the 1950's

During the 1950's, the Faculty Committee provided leadership and guidance for the international student program. Among significant developments in this area for which the committee and the staff working directly with international students were jointly responsible are:

1. An orientation program for new foreign students was initiated Autumn Quarter 1950. It included a series of six weekly meetings. The topics treated at these meetings were related to the life and work of the student on the campus. In 1958, a two and one-half day program, known as "Introduction to The Ohio State University", was initiated by the International Students Office with the substantial financial support from the Downtown Kiwanis Club and the First Community Church. This program was held at beautiful Camp Akita, 50 miles south-east of Columbus, which is owned and operated by the First Community Church. The program, which has continued ever since, is designed to help the new students understand some of the requirements that will be made upon them and opportunities provided for them by the culture of this University and community. Present at this orientation program are faculty members, guidance personnel, American and established foreign students, and representatives from the excellent Community International Student Hospitality Program. This opportunity for the new students to ask questions of their advisers and their peers is extremely helpful, since the previous education of most foreign students is similar to the European system and quite different from that of the United States. Furthermore, in the words of one of the new students:

" . . . We took up the problem of adjustment to another culture, which proved to be most fruitful and interesting, and we met each other, people from different backgrounds, different cultures, perhaps but not different in our feelings and ideals--a tiny, mixed world where everybody tried and succeeded in understanding his fellow student."

2. During the 1950's an important development was the establishment of English and Speech courses, testing, and requirements for foreign students whose native language is other than English. During the year 1949-1950, special courses in English and Speech for foreign students were initiated. Soon thereafter testing of these students and the scheduling of courses indicated by the test results became requirements.
3. In 1957, the Board of Trustees, upon the recommendation of the Executive Dean for Student Relations and the Dean of the College of Medicine made both student basic and major medical insurance a requirement for foreign students.
4. Each college office was asked to designate one counselor who would be primarily responsible for advising foreign students. These counselors were informed of special regulations pertaining to foreign students by the International Students Office.
5. Periodically questionnaires were sent to all foreign students seeking their evaluation of the services provided by the office responsible for foreign students and by the Faculty Committee. Suggestions for additional services which would be desirable were requested.
6. The Office of Vice President for Student Relations administered the Department of State financial aid program for Chinese students following the culmination of the Communist revolution in China.
7. From 1956-1957, the Student Senate and the office of Vice President for Student Relations cooperated in aiding Hungarian refugee students. The program developed under the leadership of a faculty-student committee. The Student Senate assumed the leadership in raising funds for maintenance and miscellaneous expenses and the University provided tuition scholarships. This program was administered by the office of Vice President for Student Relations.
8. Information was provided for American students interested in study abroad. Until 1958, applications for and information concerning Fulbright and similar awards abroad were handled by the office of Vice President for Student Relations, with a faculty committee making the recommendations concerning applicants to the national screening committee.
9. The International Student Affairs Assembly, the Embassy Club and the International Student Association were successively organized. (See more complete statement under Student Organizations, which follows.)

10. An International Student Adviser was named and a separate International Students Office established. (See statement which follows.)
11. The concept of an International Student Center was proposed and in 1958, was located in the George Wells Knight International House for Men. (See statement which follows.)
12. The close-working relationship with the Entrance Board and the International Students Office was strengthened with the International Student Adviser giving special attention to financial resources, immigration status, and general recommendations.
13. A part-time counselor, who was also Director of the Zonta International House for Women, and a part-time student adviser were added to the staff.
14. Responsibility for the administration of the Exchange-Visitor Program was transferred to the International Student Adviser, and additional services were provided for foreign University staff and to departments employing citizens of other countries.
15. The International Students Office assumed greater responsibility in the programming and coordination of the increasing number of short-term foreign visitors.
16. The "International Student Center and Program Fund" was established through the Development Fund.
17. A highly successful International Fair sponsored jointly by Ohio Union Activities, the Student Senate, the International Student Association, and the International Students Office was initiated.

Developments During the 1960's

1. The University's role in international education was examined by the 1959-1960 Faculty Committee on International Students under the able leadership of Doctor Louis Nemzer and a report with several major recommendations was presented to the University administration. (See Appendices)
2. Upon the recommendation of the Faculty Committee on International Students, the University Scholarships and Loans Committee began to approve each year an allocation for scholarships for international students. Further coordination of financial aid to foreign students was achieved when the Student Financial Aids Office requested the recommendation of the International Student Adviser for loans from the three small loan funds designated specifically for foreign students.
3. The International Fair, initiated in 1959, was repeated in 1960 and continued on a biennial basis through 1966. Because of the withdrawal of the Ohio Union Council and Student Assembly from this event, there was no International Fair in 1968 or 1969. One of the goals for 1969-1970 will be to re-establish the Fair.
4. There were established two direct exchange arrangements with the University of Bonn in Germany--a fraternity exchange scholarship and a Panhellenic German exchange scholarship. These two scholarship programs were coordinated so that beginning with the year 1961-1962, there has been a University of Bonn student at Ohio State and an Ohio State University student at the University of Bonn each year.

5. The 1961 National Conference of the National Association of Foreign Student Advisers was held in Columbus with the International Student Adviser as Local Arrangements Chairman and many other University staff and faculty accepting important committee assignments. (A number of state conferences and workshops have been held on the Ohio State campus.)

6. The International Student Adviser served as a member of the Board of Directors of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs from 1960-1965, and as Secretary of the Association for the years 1966-1968. She has been a general consultant of the NAFSA Field Service since 1966, and served on a number of national committees including the chairmanships of the Nominations Committee and of the Membership Committee.

7. From 1961, The Ohio State University participated in the African Scholarship Program of American Universities (ASPAU). For 1961-1962, the University agreed to accept five ASPAU students; for the succeeding year, seven. Each university participating provides for each student accepted under the program a tuition scholarship; the United States government, maintenance; and the student's own government, transportation. From the standpoint of academic performance, personality, and motivation, the caliber of the Ohio State ASPAU students has been unusually high--two students with academic records in the 3.5 point-hour ratio area, with outstanding participation in extracurricular activities and with superior personal characteristics, have been linked by Sphinx.

8. The Faculty Committee on International Students recommended and secured the approval for an American Civilization course as a substitute for the required American history course:

History 504, American Civilization, 5 hours, Mr. Coles and staff.

A survey emphasizing the origin and development of basic ideals and institutions, continuing problems of American democracy, and the United States and world affairs.

9. The International Student Adviser was selected as a participant in the 1961 NAFSA workshop on "Asian Cultures and International Educational Exchange" at Stanford University. In 1963, she was also one of the ten foreign student advisers given the opportunity to be a member of the World University Service Asian Seminar, involving eleven weeks in Southeast Asia--six days in Japan, four days in Hong Kong, and two months in India.

10. In the Summer Quarter 1964, the enrollment of 14 students from Keio University (as auditors) was the beginning of the Keio-Ohio Summer Program, which has been highly successful. Summer Quarter 1968, there were 37 students in the program. In addition to auditing courses and living in Ohio State University residence halls with American roommates, a special series of discussions with

Ohio State University faculty; tours of Columbus (including German Village, the Center of Science and Industry, etc.); and visits to American homes are involved. In addition to the staff of the International Students Office and interested faculty members, a mature Ohio State student is available on a part-time basis to counsel and to assist the Keio students in planning and executing their outstanding "Japan Night". The response of the American student roommates and other students has been unique. During the year 1968-1969, in appreciation of the contribution of Ohio State University to the Keio-Ohio Summer Program, a full scholarship was offered to an Ohio State University student for a year at the Keio International Center. A well qualified Ohio State student---a major in Japanese language and literature---was selected and will go to Keio in September 1969.

11. Autumn Quarter 1965 the first program was held in the new Assembly Room of the International Student Center. (See International Student Center.)

12. In January 1965, The Ohio State University responded to an invitation to participate in a program similar to ASPAU for Latin American students---the Latin American Scholarship Program of American Universities (LASPAU). Three LASPAU students selected in a manner similar to the excellent ASPAU student program enrolled Autumn Quarter 1966. Two additional students enrolled Autumn Quarter 1967 under this program.

International Students Office

First, as a part of the office of Vice President for Student Relations and later as a separate office, the staff directly concerned with international students have provided the special services necessary and desirable for students from other countries. It serves international students by acting as a channel for information concerning United States government laws, especially immigration regulations and by giving assistance in matters of University procedure. All new students register in this office immediately upon arrival in Columbus. They are then directed to the appropriate offices to complete registration and to make housing arrangements. Staff members, upon request, explain regulations concerning extension of passports and visitors' permits, University health and accident insurance, travel outside the United States, student employment and practical training and attempt to give assistance in matters needing individual attention. All international students are urged to feel free to consult this office at any time.

Students under United States government, foreign government or private sponsorship keep in especially close touch with this office. The International Students Office serves as liaison with the Institute of International Education, United States government departments, and other sponsors. The excellent working relationship with the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Department of State, other United States government agencies, the Institute of International Education, foreign government cultural attaches, and other sponsoring agencies have been of great benefit to all involved.

Many campus and city organizations request students to speak at meetings or to entertain with native songs and dances. Such requests are normally handled by the International Students Office, and students who have indicated their interests along such lines are contacted. Private organizations, as well as individual families, also invite students to dinner frequently, using the facilities of the International Students Office to make arrangements.

Since 1945, an International Student Directory (later Directory of International Students and Staff) has been published. In 1949, the first International Student Handbook was published. It has been revised each year since that time.

The International Students Office and the Admissions Office publish jointly a brochure, "General Information for Applicants from Other Countries".

From 1944 to 1966, the office giving special attention to foreign students was located in the Administration Building. In the summer of 1966, the office was moved to Lord Hall. The offices in Lord Hall are larger and provide some advantages which offset at least partially the convenience of being in close proximity to the Admissions, Registrar's and Bursar's Offices.

In order to coordinate closely with the Zonta International House for Women and to provide more adequate service for the increasing numbers of foreign students, in the year 1950-1951, a half-time counselor for international students was added to the office of the Vice President for Student Relations. This counselor was also the Director of the Zonta International House for Women, which contributed greatly to the University, especially to foreign students, non-residents, as well as residents of the House from 1950 to 1968. Mrs. Mary F. Swaney (1950-1951 through 1957-1958) and Mrs. Marjorie E. Watson (1960-1961 through 1967-1968), as Directors of the Zonta House and as counselors, made outstanding contributions to the international student community. With the closing of the House in 1968, Mrs. Watson became a full-time counselor in the International Students Office.

In 1956, a mature American student was added to the staff as a counselor on a half-time basis.

In 1958, a separate International Students Office was established, with Miss Ruth C. Bailey, who as Assistant to the Vice President for Student Relations had assumed the major responsibility for overseas students from 1944, as International Student Adviser.

Student Organizations

Sometime during the 1940's, the Cosmopolitan Club was organized. Interested American and foreign students constituted the membership. In 1950, an excellent group of American student leaders organized the International Affairs Assembly. This organization joined with the YMCA-YWCA, Student Council for Religious Affairs, and other campus organizations in helping foreign students to achieve a more meaningful experience at Ohio State. At the same time the Embassy Club was organized. It worked through the International Affairs Assembly to provide a social atmosphere for the exchange of ideas. The Embassy Club programs included meetings at which international students would spotlight their own countries, open houses, informal get-togethers, etc.

Primarily because of the graduation of the American student leaders who had developed the International Affairs Assembly, its effectiveness declined and before 1955, it ceased to exist. The Embassy Club carried on several facets of the program of the International Affairs Assembly. In the year 1957-1958, a committee was established to organize a new association.

The members of the committee, the faculty adviser, and the International Student Adviser spent many hours in creating a new organization, the constitution of which was adopted in January 1958. The International Student Association is an organization aimed at establishing better communications between foreign and American students. It assumed many of the functions of both the International Affairs Assembly and the Embassy Club as they were when they were established in 1950.

Under able student leadership the first year of operation of the International Student Association was characterized by outstanding achievements including The International Student, a monthly publication of high caliber; such successful events as the International Dance-O-Rama and the International Food Festival; and above all, the International Center programs with their vital discussions.

The Association continued to develop as one of the most significant organizations on the campus. Great tribute should be paid to Doctor William Heintz who served as a very able, dedicated and perceptive official faculty adviser of the International Student Association during the period of its organization until 1966. The close liaison with the mature officers of the organization, the faculty adviser, and the International Students Office made it one of the outstanding international student organizations in the country. From the beginning (1958) Doctor Heintz has been a most effective co-director of the Introductory Program at Camp Akita—one year shortening a trip around the world by a week so that he could provide able leadership at the Camp.

For several reasons the organization lost some momentum during the years 1966-1967 and 1967-1968—membership declined, The International Student ceased to be published regularly and there were fewer cultural programs and discussions on current vital issues. However, during the year 1967-1968, the International Student Association began to regain its former effectiveness, and in 1968-1969, the organization carried a full schedule of events and during the latter part of the year resumed the regular publication of The International Student.

International Student Center

Until the autumn of 1958, most functions were held in University classrooms, churches and homes, wherever a place could be found. In order to give a sense of unity to the activities, the George Wells Knight International

House for Men was converted every Friday night into the International Student Center. The programs became so popular that the facilities rapidly became inadequate. Attendance ranged from 75 to almost 200. In some instances students had to be turned away. In 1959, the International Student Center and Program Fund was established in the Development Fund. Sufficient funds were contributed to refurbish and refurnish to a considerable extent the main floor of the George Wells Knight International House which had become known as the International Student Center. Soon thereafter the former Executive Dean for Student Relations, William S. Guthrie, became interested and devoted a great deal of time and attention to raising funds to add an assembly room for meetings and to remodel the kitchen, providing new equipment, dishes, and stainless steel tableware so that dinners for up to 100 persons could be prepared in the kitchen and served in the assembly room. He was successful in raising approximately $15,000. His successor as Executive Dean for Student Relations, Doctor John T. Bonner, Jr., secured authorization to use a matching amount from University funds. In 1964, the construction of the addition was begun and the first function was held in the new facilities in the Autumn Quarter 1965. It has provided an excellent meeting place and facilities for not only the International Student Association, but also many other student groups. During the year 1968-1969, it has been used to a greater extent than any previous year. On Friday afternoons from one to six, coffee is served and all students, foreign and American, are invited to drop in and converse in an informal way. Starting at 4:30, slides from various countries are shown. During this year the Center was busy with 61 different organized programs, exclusive of the coffee hours. Innumerable unplanned and informal gatherings for table tennis, television viewing, and socializing also took place.

The chief user of the Center's meeting facilities is the International Student Association, composed of both foreign and American students. Other groups which have used the Center include all of the nationality groups, the Islamic Foundation, the residents of the George Wells Knight International House, plus such clubs as Circolo Italiano, Spanish Club, Luso-Brazilian Club, Ethiopian students, Peace Corps, Institute of International Education-related students, Keio University students, Philippine students, and United Arab Republic faculty. Authorization to use the Center is obtained from the International Students Office.

In recent years the appropriate Ohio State international student organizations have been hosts to national and regional meetings of their associations including the Fifth National Convention of the Muslim Students Association of the United States and Canada, the Annual Convention of the India Students Associations of the Midwest, the Midwest Chinese Students and Alumni Rally, and the Annual Reunion of the students enrolled in colleges and universities throughout the country under the African Scholarship Program of America.

George Wells Knight International House for Men

The George Wells Knight International House for Men, operated under the joint supervision of the International Students Office and the Housing Office, serves as a residence for a small number of international students.

During the academic year 1968-1969, the residents were graduate students or men over 21 years of age coming from the following countries: Ceylon, Costa Rica, England, France, India, Indonesia, Korea, Mauritius, the Philippines, Taiwan, Thailand, and the United States.

Community

In 1947, the United Church Women of Columbus and Franklin County appointed a committee to provide home hospitality for foreign students. The original invitations came for dinner on Thanksgiving, and it was suggested also that families invite foreign students to their homes for dinner at other times during the year. In 1964-1965, the program initiated and carried on by the United Church Women was expanded to include other major organizations in the city and the emphasis was changed from an occasional invitation to the host family plan, whereby any foreign student who is interested would have a Columbus family throughout his stay in the community. This program has been very successful. Not all students, of course, are interested or have the time to participate in it extensively, but many rewarding relationships have been established.

Special Activities for Wives of Foreign Students and Visitors

Many foreign students and exchange visitors are accompanied by their wives and children (more than 200). If the wives are not enrolled as students and if they have small children, they would normally have few opportunities to become acquainted with the community. International Neighbors is an organization whose purpose it is to promote friendship and understanding among women of all nationalities who are living in the Columbus area. International Neighbors regularly sponsors the following activities for wives which are extremely helpful:

Class in Conversational English. This class, arranged by the International Students Office especially for wives of international students, is taught by a member of the English Department of the University. It meets every Saturday morning.

International Neighbors Meetings. These meetings are held regularly during the year. Such matters as local telephone and postal service, public transportation, and medical and social services are explained and American manners and customs are discussed. Transportation and baby sitting are provided. Wives from other countries provide cultural programs.

International Neighbors Coffee Hours. The neighborhood coffee hours are informal social activities held monthly in American homes for both foreign and American women.

No history of the International Students Office at The Ohio State University would be complete without reference to the outstanding contributions of the administrative officials in charge of the Student Relations area. Each has provided imaginative leadership, moral and financial support. Certainly without Vice President Bland L. Stradley, Executive Dean William S. Guthrie, and Executive Dean John T. Bonner, Jr., the International Students Office would not have developed as it has during the 25 years of its existence. It is already apparent that Vice President John T. Mount and Dean of Students Ruth H. Weimer are providing and will continue to provide the same type of leadership and support.
